SCHOOL REPORT.

To Parents and Citizens of New London :

The work of another school year has ended, and the task of preparing the annual report is at hand. We shall be very brief in our remarks, feeling that the character and success of our schools and teachers are already too well known to need any expended exaltation or criticism from us.

It is very evident that our schools are not perfect. They do not reach that high standard which they ought to and might attain. Committees make mistakes, teachers err, and parents do not always co-operate for the best interest of their children; yet, notwithstanding all these obstacles and shortcomings of humanity, the cause of education is gradually advancing, and is destined to continue as long as worthy and natural instructors are recognized in preference to any others. Schools are what teachers make them. To them, and to them alone are we to look for their future welfare and success. Model teachers are not only well versed in the branches to be taught, but also possess natural abilities to govern and to impart their knowledge to others; hence the adage, "Teachers are not made; they are born."

Ten female teachers have served during the year—two with no previous experience, and eight with more or less experience in teaching. Two of these have attended a normal school. Three were retained in the same school for the year. Three commencing in the fall were re-employed for the winter term. These teachers have had under their care 138 different pupils, of whom 116 were between five and fifteen years of age; one less than five; twenty-one above fifteen; seventy-five boys and sixty-three girls. Most of these have made good improvement, and have been under the charge of those of whom we are justly proud, and we think, as a whole, our schools never ranked higher than today

PLEASANT STREET.

Failing to make satisfactory arrangements in the spring, for the schooling of a portion of the children at Pleasant street, no provision was made for them until fall, when a school was opened at that place. It prematurely closed at the end of eight weeks, three of the four pupils having withdrawn, on account of being frightened, we are told, by wild animals.

TEXT BOOKS.

This new school law somewhat increases the duties of committee and teachers, yet it is a pecuniary advantage to parents and places their children all on a level so far as books and supplies are concerned, and also tends to systematize and condense the teacher's work.

We have made nearly a complete change in text books, believing that it was much better for the town to at once procure a new series of books than to gradually become the owner of an old set that has been in use many years. The following have been introduced: Butler's Geographies, Butler's Arithmetics, Harper's and Lippincott's Readers, Harrington's Speller and Eggleston's History, involving an expense of nearly three hundred dollars.

BOARD.

The teachers at the West Part, Burpee Hill, North and Low Plain have been boarded for two dollars a week, while those at Colby Hill and Scytheville have been obliged to pay as high as three dollars. Now there is no reason why board at the two latter places should be any higher than in the other parts of the town. Will not some one in said divisions volunteer to equalize this inequality?

ROLL OF PERFECT ATTENDANCE.

Scholars who have been in school three terms without being absent or tardy: Horace C. Stanley, Libbie Sargent, Maud Fellows, Willie Clough, Clarence W. Gay, Walter Gay, Emma Shepard, Jesse Melinda, Charlie Nye, Emil Nye, Earl Nye.

Two terms—George W. Whitney, Agnes M. Baker, Lizzie Morgan, Alice Sargent, Josa Woodward, Alice Bickford, Robert Whittaker, Edith B. Williams, Charlie Messer.

One term—Fred W. Knowlton, Millie H. Davis, Cora B. Merrill, Gustie M. Todd, Robert C. Hill, Fred A. Todd, Emma Stanley, Flora Messer, Florence Preston, Addie Williams, Wilbur Knowlton, Herbert Knowlton, Una Rowell, Oliver Messer, George E. Fifield, Alfred Pillsbury, Hattie Burpee, Ethel Davis, Angie McConnell, Florence Bickford, Libbie Bickford, Florence Woodward, Mary Lovering, Bessie Lord, Robert Lord, Ernest Fellows, Delia Gay, Rosie Messer, Jennie Messer, Frank Gay, Eddie Messer, Charlie Messer, Genie Ellis, Mary Messer, Emeline Philbrick, Alice Philbrick, Howard Philbrick, George Philbrick, Elmer Messer, Bernice R. Brown, Annie Brown, Julia Todd, Martha Wells, Charlie Hunt, George Todd, Howard Todd, Charlie Morgan, Ralph Todd, Frank Marston, Belle Nye, Roy Emery, Shirley Todd, Reuben Dickey, E Leroy Todd, Harry Messer.

Respectfully submitted,

W. M. KNOWLTON, Member of School Board.

New London, N. H., Feb. 28, 1891.
